Explanation for Item 19:

The White Clay Watershed Association (WCWA) receives funds from various sources (primarily the National Park Service through a Cooperative Agreement) for projects in the White Clay Creek watershed in Delaware and Pennsylvania as a result of its national Wild & Scenic designation. These projects are administered on behalf of the WCWA by the White Clay Creek Watershed Management Committee (WCCWMC), an unincorporated organization consisting of representatives of local governments, citizen groups, and interested individuals in the watershed. The WCWA handles the finances for the WCCWMC, and WCWA reporting reflects the combined activities of both organizations.

Finances for the WCCWMC were previously handled by the University of Delaware. The transition took place during FY2005, and some FY2005 WCCWMC expenses were paid by the U of D.
